Horn Pond is a landmark where Woburnites have favored recreation and relaxation for decades in the depths of ragged trails, soaring mountain heights, and translucent waters. From generation to generation, locals have trekked along these winding paths on bike rides, meandering walks, fishing trips, and hiking expeditions. The pond continues to be a cherished place where residents create their greatest memories with family and friends and strengthen their connection to the small city. Many moons ago, the same pride and admiration for Horn Pond swelled within the Massachusetts tribe. The Massachusetts lived in the territory of Mount Towanda (Horn Pond Mountain) and revered their almighty god Manitou "The Great Spirit". When the Massachusetts accepted Manitou as their leader, he brought peace and prosperity to the terrorized lands by granting the Massachusetts bountiful harvests, strong men and women, and successful hunting trips. Because of his accomplishments and strong leadership skills, the Massachusetts wished to make a memorial for their all-powerful leader. They named the transparent waters below the mountain Lake Innitou, "Looking Place of the Great Spirit". As time went on, the Massachusetts were able to look down upon the lucid waters and recall the fond memories they shared of their great leader. Just as the Massachusetts tribe used Lake Innitou as a place of reflection, graduates will be able to reflect on memories at WMHS with their 2013 yearbook. Since 1947, the yearbook has been traditionally named "Innitou". Innitou unites Horn Pond's original name with the WMHS yearbook as they each serve to be a reflection of time passed. Innitou will always appear on the cover of our yearbooks as it is important in Woburn to hold onto tradition and history.

welcome to Woburn

From the Commons to Rag Rock to Four Corners, locations across Woburn cause both old and young to pause in brief moments of nostalgia as memories wash over their minds. As many of us move into the next phase of our lives, we may find ourselves leaving our home to pursue our futures elsewhere. We must all remember, though, no matter where we may find ourselves that there is a community of almost 40,000 strong waiting to welcome us back. Lying upon the trails of Horn Pond and etched into the bleachers of Ferullo Field is a token we will continue to carry on our shoulders and in the back of our hearts for the remainder of our lives: our past. We will forever remember the Woburn Holidays of Halloween and Flag Day. As children, we all spent the morning of the Halloween parade running across the curb to beat our friends for yet another piece of candy. As teenagers, we will remember spending Flag Day huddled among massive groups of other high school students while fireworks filled the sky. During the winter, we will remember the bitter New England nights each year when the center would burst from darkness with thousands of lights scattered across treetops. Woburn will continue to provide numerous familiarities that we will require as our futures rapidly evolve. When the oppressive hand of homesickness begins to intrude into our lives, we will know that Woburn, our home, will always be waiting to welcome us back with a comforting embrace.

life in New England

We have been fortunate enough to experience a snowflake melt on our skin, the crunch of fallen leaves underneath our feet, the hot sun beat down on our back, and the rain softly patter on our windowsill during an April shower. As our lives shift and change, so too do the seasons. From fall to summer, we watch our world blend into a swirl of red, orange, and yellow that the clouds eventually hideaway behind a blanket of white snow. With time, New England begins to warm and the veil of snow is lifted to reveal a landscape of lush green. Each season defines its own form of beauty, and we have had the opportunity to grow and develop with each New England season as our background.

New England culture is anchored in the city of Boston, but our hearts have always felt closer to the coasts in the East and the mountains, forests, and lakes to the North. The Cape is the picturesque centerpiece to coastal New England with its incredible seafood, beaches, and people. Many of us, though, also spend our summers hiding away along the coasts of Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. While some choose the coasts, others choose to spend their summers living along the fringes of lakes such as Ossipee and Winnipesaukee. When summer reaches its conclusion and the seasons finally begin to change, New Englanders eagerly await the first major snowfall, so they may once again return to the mountain slopes to ski and snowboard. Regardless of the season, we have often felt the sometimes-insular lifestyle of suburbia close in around us, and instantly bought ourselves a ticket on the MBTA to escape once again into Boston. New Englanders have found a way to enjoy themselves by traveling to any area of the region for escape and adventure.

As one of the first areas of the New World to become permanently settled by Europeans, remnants from the past can be seen scattered throughout the region in architecture and landmarks. Even before then, remainders of the Native Americans, such as the Indian Bowl on Horn Pond Mountain, survive as reminders to the great people who once ruled this land. The United States itself was formed on the very ground we walk upon. One must only drive to Lexington and Concord to see the place where a shot heard 'round the world began America's fight for independence from Britain. Walking down the final leg of Paul Revere's long but crucial journey or through the hallways of the Lowell Mills, New Englanders have the incredible opportunity to travel back through America's past to see how far our country has come.

Life in New England has been a gift to each and every one of us, which is evident in the pride New Englanders constantly display for their home region. As a world and national leader in business, politics, and media, we have often felt the ripples of global and national changes firsthand. Furthermore, we have become a global example of high standards of living with strong educational foundations and have never feared moving to our own beat. By choosing and enacting decisions not always agreeable with the American cultural standards of the time, New England has become one of the most progressive areas of the world in acceptance and freedoms. Life in New England cannot truly ever be fully explained due to the many ways people define themselves as New Englanders, but it can be summarized through our diverse weather, people, history, and landscape.

we dedicate this book to...

We are extremely proud to dedication our yearbook to Mrs. Gayle Murphy. Mrs. Murphy is alumna of Woburn High School and has served as an English teacher and Department Chairperson in the Woburn Public School System for over 35 years. Mrs. Murphy is known for her undeniable grace and commitment to work, and for many students who have passed through these halls, her class has been a highlight of their WMHS experience.

Her beautiful wardrobe and classic color schemes would brighten anyone's day when they walk into her classroom. Known for her love of Irish writers, she has taught many different levels of English, from Enhanced Competency to Advanced Placement along with one of her favorite courses, Women and Literature. Many former students have remarked that their writing skills improved tremendously and they developed a fondness for writing because of Mrs. Murphy. With her door always open for her students, she answers any and all questions regarding essays, subject matter, or simply about life. Mrs. Murphy truly cares about her students. She always wants them to do well and she pushes them to be their best. She teaches the students lifelong skills such as being organized, being prepared, researching and how to discuss issues. She has been one of the most dedicated and passionate teachers to have taught at Woburn High, and we are proud to dedicate this 2013 yearbook to her. The staff and students of Woburn High will miss your wonderful smile and caring personality. Thank you so much for all of your hard work and dedication.

fierce foundation

Each of us has taken very different paths to finally reach the immensely pivotal moment that is graduation. We cannot forget that it is not only the destination but the journey that is so influential on each of our characters, and our journeys are filled with the people and memories we will forever look back to for comfort and warmth. Childhood seems like a dream that we merely floated across filled with soccer practices, Pop Warner games, and Saturday evenings running across back yards until the moon would finally call an end to the day. Thirteen years ago, we timidly walked down the hallways of The Malcolm White, Hurld, Saint Charles, Reeves, Wyman, Shamrock, Goodyear, Lin-scott, Altavesta or Clapp Elementary School in between frighteningly large fourth and fifth graders to our kindergarten class. The next four years were spent making our first, and for some, last best friend, joining our first sports teams, picking up our first instrument, and of course, there was some formal education in between these important events. To this day, many of us are still confused, though, as to how the Reading and Math MCAS benefitted us in third grade, and our one great regret is that we never fully appreciated recess until it was gone.

Unfortunately, that inevitably disconcerting and awkward step into our preteen years occurred when we were rounded up as unprepared fifth graders and herded into either the Joyce or Kennedy middle school. We all feared and anticipated the moment when we would leave the comforts of elementary school behind. Over the next three years we would experience moments of cringe worthy mistakes, embarrassments, and first times. For our counterparts at Saint Charles this was a seamless transition, but for the rest of us, our classes and schools infinitely expanded to intimidating sizes. For some, middle school was akin to a carefree ride on the High school's elevator with a fresh new pass from the nurse. For others, it was more like a hike from the cafeteria to your math class in C Hall on the fourth floor. Middle School did have its high points, though. We formed many more friendships, opened our first home-away-from-home: our locker, met many new and interesting teachers, and attended our first official dance. Middle School was a necessary and lengthy right of passage in order to mature enough to make the next great leap.

When high school finally arrived, we each began to define ourselves, and chose and made decisions that would not only assert our independence but also directly impact our present and future. As Woburn students from the Joyce, Kennedy, and Saint Charles merged together to form 2009's freshman class, we were astounded to discover how strikingly similar we all were. The rumors and lies quickly dissipated as we all came together to form a diverse community of scholars, athletes, musicians, volunteers, politicians, leaders, and friends. It is difficult to believe nearly two decades have passed since we first opened our eyes to glimpse the world, and although not always easy, our past is part of us and a token we will continue to carry on our shoulders and in the back of our hearts. Our roots, which support the individual we have become, are firmly embedded in the city of Woburn and its traditions. While we continue to grow and develop, they will stay firm, even while some of us move thousands of miles away. Walking through the doorway of graduation, and transitioning into the next great adventure of our life is impossible without first taking a brief look back and remembering.

remember those lunchbox days?

A lifetime ago, we walked nervously towards the door of our kindergarten classes hand in hand with our parents beginning an adventure that would last for the next twelve years. Internal instincts drove us to make friends with one another, and eventually we were spending our afternoons at recess running across playgrounds, playing kickball, and arguing over exactly what the rules were to four square. We also learned the basics of education, such as addition, subtraction, phonics, multiplication, and biology, from an incredibly patient group of teachers who dedicated their lives to building our foundations. Our four years in elementary school helped plant our roots, and there is still a bond shared between those with whom we spent these most innocent years of our lives. Looking back, it is impossible not to see how strong our foundations were and how far we have come from the little boy or girl sitting at our desk completely focused on writing a very misshapen W with our crayons.

meet me in the middle

Middle School was our very first new beginning. From the moment sixth grade started, we were thrown into a collection of nervous students from across Woburn. Fortunately, we were all stuck in the same position, though, of scrambling to make friends as quickly as possible to ensure that the next three years would be enjoyable. Once we had our base groups established, things did become slightly calmer. Middle school was also when we gained our first taste of independence from parents and teachers, and overall was a time of transitions. With our independence came new decisions on how to responsibly or irresponsibly spend our time. Finally, we could stay out past ten o'clock and girls and guys began to hang out with one another after school. At the same time, teachers began to expect more of us by assigning more homework and tests, and sports practices increased from once a week to twice or even three times every week. Middle school was training to acquire the necessary skills to ensure our success during our four years of high school.

freshmen

From the moment we hesitantly traversed the Woburn insignia embedded into the lobby floor, our high school careers had begun. We were not sure what to expect or even where our classes were located. But by wandering through the high school's hallways, we did manage to find something other than classes: ourselves. Sitting together in the auditorium for the first time, Mr. Finnigan explained that the efforts and time we spent towards our high school careers would directly impact our overall experience. He stated that high school was our time to try and experience new things in order to discover exactly where our passions lie.

We decided to follow his advice, and freshman year, we began to join classes, clubs, sports, and other extracurricular activities that truly interested us. We found new friends and affirmed bonds with old ones. Differences that seemed so important and fundamental in middle school dissipated into acceptance. Our newfound independence allowed us to start down the path of discovering whom we were and where we wanted to go. After a few short days of adjustment and memorizing our schedule, we were prepared to embrace all of the challenges that high school could throw at us, or at least, we believed we were ready.

new beginnings

Erin Keough, Jacquelyn Kelley, and Kathleen Sullivan happily make their way into the auditorium, while Scott Parker seems to be having second thoughts about high school. Megan Moseley and Kail Winston compare schedules to see the number of classes they have together. Andrew Ryan sits in class ready to start his first day of school. Danysha Maitre, Sarah Malloy, Emily Doke, Courtney Wilson, Alexandra Santullo, Evan Fonseca, Brianna Shaw, Michael Walsh, Michael Bookner, and Daniel Rae march into their very first assembly. Elizabeth Roche timidly makes her way to her first class. Dan Bergeron embraces freshman year with open arms.

Tyler Crowe and Maximiliano Deulofeu seem a little more excited for their freshman year than Chad Russis and Kevin Louranco as the walk into school together. Karina Cruz sits in class happily waiting for her teacher to arrive. Danysha Maitre stares blankly down the hallway while trying to figure out how to get to her next class. Philip Gillette and Jeff Aldorizio prepare for their first English class with Ms. Gillis. Timothy Connor and Arfaat Ali pose together for one of their first classes in high school. Iveta Stantcheva and Timothy McCall are all smiles in Ms. Rossi's biology class. Wyatt Towle mentally prepares himself for freshman year while looking over his schedule. Charlene Brown already breaks the cell phone policy on her first day of school. Alexandra Murphy, Morgan Murphy, Cara Mistretta, Julie McCarthy, and Christina O'Brien stick together while trying to maneuver their way through the halls. Haley Rafferty diligently listens to her teacher while Michael Paladino and Catherine Cooper decide to take the moment to pose for a picture instead.

1,363 days until graduation...

It was astonishing to think that only a few short months had passed and already we had changed so much. Since our first day of school, the hallways and floor's sizes had shrunk down to a more manageable scale within our minds, and faces slowly became more recognizable. After-school practices and meetings had become commonplace in our daily schedules, and no Friday Night was complete without cheering for some Tanner sports team. Teachers and coaches, already impressed with our academic and athletic abilities, began to spread the word around the school that we were a class with incredible potential.

Even with the excitement of freshman year, though, we still upheld our academic performance with constant vigilance. It was our time to see if we were capable of handling high school level classes, and we all wanted to put ourselves in good positions to be selected for the advanced placement classes we had heard whisperings of. Freshman year, we were also forced to once again take the MCAS exam, but this time, we had to receive a passing to graduate. Our class's aspirations and ambitions were already beginning to lead us down paths beyond high school, so we embraced the MCAS as another step further into our potential futures.

Michael Walsh gives Daniel Bergevin a reassuring pat on the back while walking to their first class. Abdelkabir Asrary and Andrew Allen head to homeroom on the first day of school. Mrs. Haden's freshman year Latin class look to her with fear as she explains declensions. Michael Paladino, Scott Parker, and Forest Mathieu try to focus during their class. Gemma Fuller, Chloe Gill and Michaela Quigley are laughing about summer memories. Benjamin Quinn stares nervously into the camera lens. Samantha Azera heads to her first period class after an assembly. Michaela Quigley and Cristina Pinto stroll down the hallways in between classes. Gloriana Herdendez rushes to her next class after the late bell is rung. Abigail Bose, Kimberley Byrne and Kristin Buehler are full of smiles and excitement walking into the auditorium. Ralitsa Gencheva is prepared to start class. Kassidy Borselli and Alexandra Murphy compare schedules while walking down the hall.

fierce devotion

Kristin Buehler has fierce devotion towards volunteering. Every year for the past three years, Kristin and sixty-five other students have spent a week in Trinidad with local churches and children donating their time at nursing homes, orphanages, and construction sites. Kristin loves to play games and sing songs with the children she meets. Her favorite moment in Trinidad was when the people of the village she was volunteering at made a cake and cards for her birthday.

Brooke Lonergan, Hannah Brassard, Alexandra Pappas, and Iveta Stantcheva are out enjoying a fall afternoon. Some senior friends gather at a sporting event. The field hockey girls have a blast at a pasta party. Abigail Lavigne gives a little spirit jump with excitement about her freshman year. Caleigh Lennon, Christina O'Brien, Brooke Lonergan, Gavin Wilson, Davis Curry, Jaclyn Quinlan, Alexandra Murphy all gather during a fun weekend. Cassidy Borselli and Courtney Lynch anxiously await to begin cheering for the Woburn Tanners in front of the entire school. Meanwhile, Kelly Garrity and Chloe Gill take a fun picture over at the field. Amanda Ruderman, Samantha Torrice, Jacqueline Trotta, Jennifer Farino, and Jessica Hogan all smile big before leaving for a day of festivities. Jaclyn Quinlan, Nicole Peterson, and Kayla Smith are having fun hanging out over the weekend. Elizabeth Roche and Michael Paladino ruin a nice picture of Nicholas Dalton and Dylan Crowley. Shannon Gay and Kathleen Sullivan are way too excited for their dinner. April Hunt, Rachel Wells, and Antonella Corleto are having an amazing time freshman year. James Poulakidas attempts to pose like a model while trying on a few wigs.

freshman dance

Finally, our first major dance was moving closer and closer, and everyone was in a state of excited anxiety. Those who had managed to purchase tickets to Fall Ball before the juniors, seniors, and sophomores snagged them all, already had a high school dance under their belt. The rest of us, however, were forced to remember what little dance formalities we had learned from eighth grade. Meanwhile, freshman girls were preparing themselves to partake in the teenage right of passage that is dance preparation. With lists and wallets in hand, they managed to buy new dresses and shoes, get their hair cut, had their nails done, and were ready by seven o'clock sharp. Freshman boy's only duty was to ensure their tie matched their shirt and shoes.

The night of the dance, we hurried inside from our parents' cars excited to see if the next few hours would live up to our expectations and preparations. Unfortunately, what we first uncovered was groups of our classmates huddled awkwardly together in quiet conversation. Thankfully, two brave souls entered the dance floor, and it became acceptable for everyone to begin enjoying the night. When the final song began to play, we were all tired yet overjoyed with another night of memories behind us. When the final note of "I Don't Want to Miss A Thing" by Aerosmith finally sound, we were already thinking about the next dance. Girls realized any missteps they had made, and were ready to come back next year with even better hair, dresses, and nails. Guys began to consider whether it was finally time to buy a tie that was not simply black or blue. We walked out through the double doors of the high school contemplating how we would change when we made the same walk after sophomore semiformal the following year.

dance the night away

Jeremy Macneil and Michael Paladino take advantage of their brief moments with the fuzzy hat to dance crazy and stare seriously into the camera. Danysha Maitre, Veronica Casseus, and Clarissa Michel pose with friends while laughing the night away. Kayla Smith and Kristin Buehler look excited to head back out into the center of the dance floor. Philip Gillette and Sarah Malloy take a quick picture before dancing their feet off. As the dance begins to wind down, Peter Decubellis takes a break with a friend off to side of the lobby. All the while, DJ Dan spins some funky beats.

we're back for more

Somehow, we had each managed to complete our first year of high school and were already returning for another. With new school supplies and a willingness to push through the crowds to get to class, we arrived at the school's lobby prepared to face any of the obstacles or mistakes we may have experienced in the previous year. No longer freshman, but still not upperclassmen, we were in danger of becoming the forgotten middle child. Of course, our grade was unwilling to allow that to happen. We continued to actively participate in many after school sports and activities where some had already found positions on varsity teams. In classes, we continued to display the strong academics and fierce competition we had become known for during our freshman year. A select few even had the opportunity to take their first advanced placement class. During sophomore year we reaffirmed and created friendships while continuing to succeed in a diverse range of areas and subjects.

Kayla Smith, Kylee Maher, and Cassandra Connolly take a quick picture while hanging out together. A group of students walk through the lobby of the high school on their first day of sophomore year. Benjamin Quinn and Benjamin Soli walk to lunch together. A group of girls rent a limo for a Girls Night Out. Brooke Lonergan and Anne-Marie Holland pose for a picture together. A group of sophomore girls try on some Christmas sweaters. Timothy McCall and Michael Paladino pose for an in-costume picture for the Sound of Music. Deirdre O'Connor and Gavin Wilson walk arm in arm to class. Abigail Bosc, Kimberley Byrne, and Kristin Buehler can not stop laughing on their way to class. Svetoslava Vodenicharska is concentrating in French class while Kathleen Doherty's attention wanders towards the other end of the class.

While she's willing to start small, she someday hopes to manage a governor or presidential campaign and in her words, "Kick butt in Washington". Her favorite politician is Hilary Clinton for both political and personal reasons. If she could manage the campaign of any politician, it would be Mitt Romney due to the "mess his advisors have made of his campaign."

one step closer

Finally, we had the opportunity to defeat MCAS once and for all. All that was required was one section of Math and English as well as a long composition, and we would never see the MCAS again. For most students, that hopeful thought was enough to carry them to the end of each test with perseverance and intensity. Despite people's fears of recalling math from freshman year, we were still forced into classes filled with students of similar last names for two different weeks of testing. As we finished writing the last sentence in our long composition, about eleven years of a test whose purpose was always slightly unclear, finally lay behind us.

Another positive aspect of sophomore year was our ability to choose between a greater number of electives. Students rose to the opportunity to try new things and see exactly where their interests and passions lied. From accounting to photography, a range of classes covering a wide spectrum of subjects was filled with eager students from the class of 2013. For many, sophomore year was a time to solidify or discover whether they were interested in art, literature, math, photography, business, science, music, or any number of other subjects.

Melina Vargas, Haley Rafferty, and Gemma Fuller are in no rush to leave the cafeteria and go back to class. Andrew St. Germain, Benjamin Soli, and Matthias Griecci are excited to listen to the class officer's speeches. Ralitsa Gencheva, Sadie Harmon, and Jyoti Nair rush towards their second period class. Nicholas Sargent, Maximiliano Deulofeu, David Kisiel, and John Bridge walk towards the auditorium. Deanna Torres stops for a picture in the hallway. Megan O'Riordan, Kelly Garrity and Erica Chepulis rush to make into inside the school before the late bell. Melina Vargas, Anthony Giglio, and Jeremy McNeil read their speeches to the entire class. Chloe Gill, Danysha Maitre, and Stephanie Ladas listen to the speech being read, while also reading over their own speeches in their minds. The freshman year class officers pose for a picture with our former class advisor. Justin Grooms sits next to a very happy Michael Paladino before reading speeches. Charlene Brown and Kail Winston discuss their day at school before leaving. Sarah Angelo, Mia Leone, and James Poulakidas struggle to carry all their books into school. Andrew Flagg and Lindsay Nixon walk off the school bus, starting the day off right.

Sophomore semi-formal was an exciting new adventure because it was more important than freshman dance but still not quite at the caliber of junior prom. The idea of asking another person to a dance was terrifying for many. Guys worried about finally mustering the confidence to ask someone, and girls worried about being asked at all. Some especially nervous sophomore boy decided that he would ask the girl he wanted to go with some time in November so no one else could ask her first. It was unclear exactly who that boy was, but he set off a chain reaction that sent sophomore boys scrambling and rushing to find dates. By December vacation, most of our grade already knew whom they would pose with for their semiformal picture. The night of the dance arrived and was, of course, a success. The awkwardness of freshman dance had passed, and we spent most of the night trying to calculate exactly how many songs one should spend dancing with their date.

Stephen George heads to the auditorium. Ralitsa Gencheva stares into the camera lens. Lindsay Nixon, Christina O'Brien, and Kathleen Doherty pose in front of a truck in Boston. Jacqueline Kelley, Hannah Brassard, and Iveta Stantcheva take a quick picture before homecoming. Jacqueline Kelley and Adam Risser try to figure out their schedules after leaving the auditorium. Rebecca Lake can not stop laughing at whatever Haley Rafferty is telling her. Anthony Giglio seems to have broken his umbrella in France. Kayla Smith, Jaclyn Quinlan, and Caleigh Lennon make fun of a statue in Salem. Farinbanu Shaikh takes a break in class. Jared Baker and Evan Fonseca show their support for the Green Bay Packers with a festive poncho. Daniel Stiffler is slightly confused about where his next class is. Matthias Grieci seems to be asking Jeremy Daigneau some thought provoking questions. Students from Italian class pose for a picture together. The new Freshman Mentors look out at into a new class that they will help guide through their first year of high school. Colleen Quinton is excited for class. A group of boys stop working for a quick picture. Kara McCue, Austin Smith, Katelyn McCann and Joseph Titi all smile while walking through the halls.

let the stress begin...

Finally, we had survived two years of high school and had reached our highly anticipated yet greatly feared junior year. Seniors and Woburn High graduates reminded us to avoid becoming engrossed in the college process and enjoy every last moment of high school. Of course, our class being highly motivated had the word "college" on the tip of our tongues by the very first day of school. Finally considered upperclassman, we expected to walk the hallways with the ability to part freshman like the Red Sea. Unfortunately, a new freshman class still managed to clog the stairways, and despite our new title, junior year somehow consisted of even more homework, tests, and late nights. The best aspect, though, was that we could finally drive, and even if someone still did not possess a sometimes-unattainable drivers license, there was always a friend with a passenger seat vacant for them. No longer did we have to endure painfully overcrowded bus rides or be dependent upon our parents to go from one place to another. We possessed the great joy of mobile transportation. From early morning drives to school for the best parking space, to Friday nights in McDonald's parking lots with friends, we were sure to use every last drop of gas our parents left in our tanks. We enjoyed junior year because we were prepared for our third time around the track. While growing accustomed to the strange qualities and characters of Woburn High over the precious two years, we had also learned exactly what it meant to have pride for our school and ourselves.

Lizomarie Cruz and Angela Pappalardo walk hand in hand to first period. Corey Fumicello gets caught in deep thought. Glorianna Hernandez, Luis Rodriguez, and Emily Messina kick back in their first period class. Lindsey Nixon, Patrick Doherty, and Rory O'Brien work together to push their way through the crowded lobby. David Pratt, Kyle Isbart, and Andres Santiago Jr. relax in the back of their class for a few minutes. Noah Guzman, Philip Gillette, and Christopher Claflin struggle to make their way up the always crowded main staircase. Elyse Fish has her hands full while walking into the auditorium.

fierce scholar

Svetoslava Vodenicharska, or Sweety as she is known by the class of 2013, has always strived to perform at the highest level in academics. She is graduating with nine advanced placement classes, and has completed one in every subject. She has taken math classes at Harvard University, and during her freshman year, she completed chemistry classes with a Northeastern professor in order to receive enough credits to take advanced placement biology one year early. She has interned at a chemical engineering company, and someday hopes to become an engineer or doctor.

to SAT or ACT? that is the question

Time and time again, teachers, students, guidance counselors, and parent reminded us that junior year was our most important in terms of academics. It was the year we had to start thinking about colleges and our planning our futures. To have the futures we were already planning, we needed to keep our schedules and grades in control. We also had to begin preparing for the most hated part of any high school career: standardized tests. First, we had to make the choice between taking the ACT, SAT, or both. Many even had to have an idea of the colleges they would apply to, so they could also sign up to take the SAT two. After months of preparation, and for some no preparation at all, we were crammed into the High School's lobby far too early on a Saturday morning. Eventually we were lead upstairs to our predetermined classrooms to endure three hours of timed English, reading, and math exams. Unlucky students who signed up too late were forced to go to cities like Malden and Andover in order to take the tests. Weeks later when we checked our results online, we all breathed sighs of relief despite what our scores may have read. Somehow, we had managed to survive the tests we had been taught to dread since freshman year. We relaxed knowing we were done with the SAT or ACT, at least until we took them again in the spring of senior year.

Jules Voltaire looks content while sitting in class. Brooke Lonergan and Rachel Carbone are all smiles in their history class. Laura Rosa assists a nervous Jessica Graham in some last minute class work. Melanie Ahearn, and Erica Chepulis struggle with verb conjugations in their Italian class while Melissa Kenton starts to daydream. Seniors Jessica Hogan, Cori Gagnon, and Clarissa Michel have a mini fiesta with Mr. Finigan in his office. Kayla Peary and Kathleen Sullivan are completely focused on finishing their Algebra work during the assembly while also ignoring Brian Kinnear. Seniors in Ms. Hayden's class compete to see who's chariot will ride the best.

third time's a charm

Alexandra Santullo prepares for Halloween in her scuba diving gear. James Poulakidas and Christina O'Brien give the Ninety Nine's restaurant two thumbs up. Patience Kukunda strikes a fierce pose in class. Marissa Burns and Courtney Webb are pumped for their Friday night. # JUNIOR PROM

March 30th, 2011

to the process necessary to prepare for the big night. Ignoring "junior" and focusing only on the word "prom", though, we once again managed to work ourselves up into an excited frenzy. Luckily this time, guys did not begin asking girls to go with them in November, but instead managed to wait until at least December. We purchased our tickets weeks in advance already fighting over which table we would sit. Finally the day of the dance arrived and girls spent the majority of it preparing. Around six o'clock, battered Honda Accords and old Nissan Altimas arrived at the high school with students from the class of 2013 dressed in gowns and tuxes ready to take pictures. Afterwards, everyone returned to their cars to drive over to the Hilton Hotel for the biggest event of our year. As the dance swayed and rocked to the music, we could not believe that another year of high school lay behind us.

Elizabeth Roche, Rachel Wells, Stephanie Ho, Samantha DiMauro, and April Hunt can barely contain their excitement for junior prom. Lydia Terpko takes Meghan Leydon and Samantha Torrice under her wing before going into the Hilton. Emily Messina and her friend strike a wild pose while leaving the dance floor. Daniel Stiffler and Philip Gillette take a break from dancing for some picture together. Daniel Rae has to be carried to his car by Tyler Bennett due to sheer excitement for the dance. A group of girls take a quick break for some delicious food. Danielle Dulong, Mia Leone, Nicholas Dalton, Elyssa Duncan, and David Kisiel look forward to an incredible night while waiting in the Hotel lobby. Casey Phillips and Svetoslava Vodenicharska sway to the beat of the music. Kevin Lourenco, Nicholas Sargent, and Nicholas Fenochetti get together for a quick shot before a long night of dancing and excitement. John-Carlo Secondino and Luis Rodriguez take a break for some refreshments.

nothing's sweeter than summertime

When you think of the summer, a number of words come to mind: beach, lemonade, sun, ice cream, laughter, tanning; the list goes on and on. Overall, summertime in Woburn can be summarized with one word: freedom. Summer is the freedom from after school practices, rehearsals, meetings, and homework. Allowing more time to spend with friends and family. From nights around a warm fire to long days at the beach, we each take the time to reaffirm bond with those close to us. The very moment the fireworks light the sky at Flag Day, we know that summertime has begun. Summer days usually consist of driving aimlessly around stopping at local spots such as Breakers, Horn Pond, and Rag Rock. Woburn students fill Hampton Beach, and take trips to popular vacation spots such as the Cape and Maine.

our final days

One of the first truths that every senior immediately discovered about their final year of high school was that it definitely was not the easiest, as everyone had lead us to believe. From the moment the school year began, students rushed to sign up for accounts on the common application, started or finished their college essays, and begged their teachers for amazing letters of recommendation. Many took the SATs or ACTs for the first, second, or even third time, in hopes that they may finally achieve their “reach-school’s” average test score. Every conversation lead back to college, and it was always in the back of everyone’s mind.

With all stresses and pressures of the college application process, we refused to relinquish the last few months of our lives with our best friends. Many weekend nights were spent driving across Woburn’s winding streets recalling memories from days long passed. Many more, though, were seized as opportunities to make new memories that would carry far beyond our days at the the highschool. Prom, graduation, and the rest of our lives waited right behind the finish line of senior year, but no one was ready to cross without first taking advantage of the time we had left together.

homecoming

2012

April Hunt quickly waves to the camera from the side of the lobby. Daniel Rae and Christopher Claflin pass in their votes for homecoming king and queen. James Poulakidas and Jordan Tenney escape the crowded dance floor for a few moments of relaxation. Jennifer Farino, Chad Russis, Kevin Lourenco, and Jacqueline Trotta rest their legs after a long night of dancing. Clarissa Michel, Christella Michel, and a friend read over the candidates for king and queen to decide which one to vote for. Kayleen Anusevitch, Amanda Ruderman, Ashley Ahlstedt, and Jessica Hogan pose for a picture before the dance even starts. Emily Doke, Katie O'Brien, and Chelsea Doke pose for a picture out in the lobby. Flavio Messias tries to take as many pictures of the dance as he can. Ashley Ahlstedt and Kayleen Anusevitch smile before the dance starts. Shawn Connolly and Evan Fonseca vote for their favorite candidates for homecoming king and queen. Rebecca Lake cannot stop laughing at one of Casey Phillips' jokes.

Homecoming dance was the break that everyone needed after months of stressful schoolwork and college applications. As seniors, the dance had a greater focus on us, and everyone was excited to see who would be crowned homecoming king and queen. Days before the dance, students rushed to enter their names for a chance to win the crown, and some amount of competition eventually arose between classmates. Certain couples campaigned to be chosen together, while other nominees stayed far away from one another. Students arrived to what was always the most crowded dance of the year with sophomores and freshmen standing on the fringes of the lobby while juniors and seniors danced closest to the DJ and farthest from the watchful eyes of the chaperones. As usual, the dance floor was incredibly hot, and the phrase “personal space” quickly lost any kind of meaning. Students ignored their discomfort and overall had a fun night filled with friends, memories, and music. Near the close of the dance, the DJ stopped the music, and nominees waited with baited breath to hear their names called as king and queen. After much suspense, Mrs. Sands finally announced that Lindsay Nixon and Luis Rodriguez as the homecoming king and queen. Homecoming dance turned out to be the perfect way to begin both spirit week and our senior year.

king and queen

Luis and Lindsay

Each year, spirit week was filled with events that provided students the opportunity to have fun, while also displaying their Tanner Pride to raise excitement for the Thanksgiving football game. The week began on a Friday, and students wore their favorite pajamas to school. Later that night, students returned to the school's lobby dressed in shirts, ties and dresses for the homecoming dance. That next Monday, grades competed against one another to decorate their hallways in the most creative variations of orange and black decorations. Of course, the senior class continued the traditional senior winning streak. For the third day of spirit week, students arrived at school dressed in matching clothes with their best friends and look-alikes. By the time the final and most exciting day of Spirit week arrived, the school was busting with Tanner pride for the annual pep rally.

What had started as a painful hour of long-winded speeches and cheers we were forced to sit through our freshman and sophomore years had evolved into a memorable rally of excitement, energy, and Tanner Pride. Thanks to the efforts of Mrs. Rossi, Mrs. Thibault, and Mrs. Gillis, the pep rally went through its first major renovation junior year. When senior year arrived, the trio, with assistance from student council, was prepared to truly entertain the school and rally excitement for the Thanksgiving football game. As we walked into the auditorium dressed in the craziest Tanner clothes we could find, the infamous words of stepper, Danysha Maille, rang through our heads: "It's about to go down." From the start to the finish, the rally was filled with energy. The band, cheerleaders, and step team displayed incredible performances, and the football players performed their own rendition of Gangnam Style with AJ Santiago dressed from head to toe as South Korea's most famous singer, PSY. Students passionately cheered for their grades as different classes competed against one another in tug-of-war, and the entire school roared as the seniors finally defeated the teachers in both the pie eating contest and the tug-of-war. Everyone left with a sense of pride for their community and excitement for the following day's game.

Justin Grooms and Jeremy McNeil cover ceiling lights with tissue paper. Davis Curry decides that the decorations look much better on Philip Gillette. Shaylin Vicente becomes tangled in some streamers. Amanda Ruderman and Kayleen Anusevitch perform their decorating duties for the class of 2013. Hopefully Mia Leone knows we can still see her. The yearbook staff poses as Snow White and her seven dwarfs on Twin Day.

Day 4: Pep Rally

Patrick Doherty, Christina O'Brien, Cara Mistretta, Gemma Fuller, Hannah Brassard, Iveta Stantcheva, Katelyn McCann, and Justin Grooms take a quick break to pose for a photo together. Mia Leone and Nicholas Monks stand together for a picture in front of the Christmas tree. Brianna Shaw is surprised by her boyfriend with a present from the tree. Jesse Minghella, Samantha Torrice, and Lydia Terpko gather on the dance floor for a photo. Clarissa Michel and Casey Phillips group together for a picture. Jeffery Aldorisio, James Poulakidas, David Pratt, and Andres Santiago take a picture before heading to the dance floor. Stephanie English and Molly Kupris put big smiles on for the camera before the dance begins. Deirdre O'Connor, Cassandra Connolly, Kayla Smith, and Jaclyn Quinlan take a break from dancing for a picture. Elizabeth Roche, Antonella Corleto, and Rachel Palmer take a break from dancing to get in a picture. Alexandria Cunha, Lindsay Pradieu, Emily Doke, Kayleen Anusevitch, Katie O'Brien, and Heather Alcala gather around the Christmas tree for a picture. David Falcone, Kevin Lourenco, Chad Russis, and Jermey MacNeil take a picture with friends. Luis Rodriguez, Lindsay Nixon, Jessica Graham, Kiera Malone, and Adam Risser show their award-winning smiles.

After Thanksgiving weekend every year, lights glistened across the Center's treetops signaling the start to the holiday season. As excitement for this captivating time of year spread through the streets of Woburn, stores everywhere began to stock their shelves with holiday themed products whose advertisements barraged televisions and billboards. Weekends quickly became consumed with trips to the Burlington Mall to purchase presents for friends and family as the year slowly came to a close, and eventually, this excitement permeated the halls of the high school consuming the thoughts of teachers and students. Slowly, students began to lose their ability to focus, and homework was periodically left incomplete due to their obsession with ABC Family's Twenty-Five Days of Christmas. From choosing the perfect tree to simply baking stocking shaped cookies, everyone needed something to hold them over until vacation finally arrived. Thankfully this distraction came in the form of a holiday dance.

As the dance's date approached, what had been fervor and excitement for the holiday season quickly transformed itself into the normal dance frenzy which included buying new dresses, finding a date, and planning exactly where to take pictures. The lucky few who were asked to attend the class of 2012's Holiday Dance thrilled the remaining students of our own grade with stories of how much fun they had the previous year. On the day of the dance, the activities committee went to work decorating the lobby with a colorful array of red, green, and gold decorations with assistance from numerous volunteers hoping to escape English and math classes. As usual, the dance was enjoyable and a great way to celebrate the holiday season.

fierce ambition

A student's true commitment lies in academics, and nowhere has our class proved itself greater than in our performance in education. In no other class have different forms of an A separated the first twenty-five students. Obviously the close proximity of these scores resulted in fierce competition between classmates. This competition extended far past this small group of elite students and occurred throughout the student body as everyone competed for places in A.P. and honors level classes. It was incredible that even with the great intensity of competition, we were still able to come together and assist one another whenever possible in order to improve the overall performance of our class. The bonds and friendships we formed with one another have always been important, and we have always chosen to raise another student up rather than to rise above them bringing them down. Whether it was a question on homework, help with a difficult concept, or a peer edit on an essay, we have always jumped at the opportunity to assist one another. The class of 2013 fully embraced the cooperativeness and friendship that exists between classmates and facilitated the creation of an environment that fostered a friendly yet high-performing educational experience.

The education we received is entirely thanks to the commitment and dedication of the many teachers we had the pleasure and honor to learn from. Many of us found ourselves overjoyed to finally see Ms. Rossi's biology class, Mr. Fowle or Mr. Sanders' algebra class, Ms. Coughlin's accounting class, or Ms. Gillis' English class listed on our schedules. While we may not have been completely happy with our junior and senior science grades, we could not deny the incredible teaching skills of Mr. Kaufman, Ms. Oura, Ms. Joseph, and Mr. Shukan. We will surely continue to remember them for their passion for teaching and interesting personalities. Incredible teachers like those previously mentioned have existed throughout Woburn High's history, and many of us had the opportunity to call them both mentors and friends. Almost all of us can name our teachers from kindergarten to senior year, which is evident of the lasting impression that they left on us. Students often fail to recognize that teachers have been and will continue to be one of their greatest allies. Education is truly the greatest gift we have received because it provided us with so many opportunities that we never would have experienced otherwise. The incredible dedication and ambition we invested in our education drove us to constantly further ourselves, and it is a trait we must continue to display in both college and the workplace. We dedicated ourselves to our ambition which has given us the foothold necessary to improve our lives and the lives of those close to us.

Activities Committee

Student Activities Committee was composed of students who worked tirelessly during high school to plan events, dances, and fundraisers for the class of 2013. Throughout our four years, the committee raised money by selling Tanner shirts, sweatshirts, and sweatpants. Everyone's favorite event was the fundraiser at Five Guy's restuarant where fifteen percent of all profits went directly to our class. The committee's greatest accomplishments were the dances. Not only did they organize the nights, but they also sold tickets, found venues and caterers, and spent numerous hours decorating. Without this group of highly motivated students, none of the memory-worthy events and fundraisers we participated in would have even occurred, and our four years at Woburn High would never have been as incredible.

IN MEMORY

RESENDEZ

6:15

Elizabeth Kenny sleeps quietly in her bed only moments before her alarm rings on a Monday morning. Looking into the mirror, Tabassum Khalifa carefully wraps her hair in a braid before school. After having a sleepover the night before, Sean Tremlett and Paul Meaney enjoy two bowls of cereal. Melanie Ahern and her sister fight for mirror space in their cramped bathroom to prepare for school. Shawn Connolly receives help from his brother on some last minute math homework, while also enjoying breakfast together. A group of students wait in line for coffee before finishing their drive to school.

the morning rush

7:29

One of the greatest struggles that Woburn High School students faced every day was arriving at school on time. At one point or another, everyone pressed the snooze button too many times or managed to completely ignore their alarms until the very last possible minute. These mornings would instantly become races to find whatever clothes somewhat matched, search for the last remaining parking spot, and run to the doors of the high school before the late bell rang. Thankfully, some greater being looked favorably upon high school students and decided to create happiness in a cup, otherwise known as coffee. Despite Mr. Deldon's persistence, this infamous substance was constantly smuggled onto school grounds to provide sleep-deprived students the necessary energy to remain conscious for seven hours of education. Although the constant struggle to arrive at school proved to be relentless, every student learned to deal with it in their own way, whether it meant arriving to school early everyday or acquiring a few tardies throughout the year.

Brett Dexter arrives late to school and must retrieve a tardy pass in the main office. Karan Suvarna, Omar Hashmi, and Jose Cruz arrive only five minutes after the late bell rings and are forced to sign the tardy slip. Alexandra Murphy flashes a bright smile at the camera on her way to first period. Katelyn Richards, Stephanie Lowell, and Margaret Dalton greet one another in the morning. Angela Stack walks is bright and cheerful as she walks into school. Abigail Bose and Erica Chepulis smile slyly at the camera after managing to stealthfully sneak into the teacher parking lot. Jamie Devereaux, Glorianna Hernandez, and Rachel D'Amato pause for a picture before parking behind the football stadium. Vincent Buza, Mark Melo, and

7:15 fierce workmanship

Every morning, the hardworking students of the Brew Crew put on their uniforms, and prepare carts filled with coffee, condiments, milk, and snacks. Their duty is to travel to various locations across the school, like the main office, to sell coffee or snacks to any paying faculty member they meet there or along the way. Often, the Brew Crew members' work is so efficient that teachers will pay them small tips in thanks. Without the Brew Crew's workmanship and dedication to their job, many of the teachers around the school may find themselves lacking the boost of energy necessary to begin their days.

ca$h-flow

The lifestyle of an American high school student comes with numerous expenses. From trips to mall to paying for gas, students always required some amount of money to get through a single day. To acquire the necessary funds, most decided to apply for part time jobs. Overall, high school students make up a small army of working Americans, and due to desperation, they will often work in any range of environments for whatever amount of money is offered to them. Despite their constant complaints about having to go to work, the skills learned there will carry many into their future careers and daily lives. Many high school students learned some of the most basic aspects of conducting oneself at a job, understanding responsibilities, and managing time properly. Although the money may be the biggest motivation for students to acquire a job, the various life skills acquired there will last far longer than any paycheck.

LaserGraze

These high school seniors job includes briefing laser tag games, hosting birthday parties, making delicious pizza, and giving out prizes in exchange for tickets. They love putting a smile on customer's faces, and watching the kids enjoy themselves in the arena and 'Adrenaline Zone'.

Unlike most part time high school jobs, Lauren performs the work of many adults for fifteen hours every week as a secretary at Lawton Real Estate. Working for the company is made much easier by her hilarious boss and the incredible housing tours of beautiful properties across the Boston area. Lauren's work at the company has inspired her to pursue a career in the real estate industry, and someday, she hopes to acquire a real estate license.

Every fall and spring, Michael greatly enjoys working for his family's landscaping company. During the winter, he plows land for the same company. He loves his time at the working because he feels the work is good and honest. Overall, Michael enjoys the feeling of accomplishments after a day's work, and looks forward to beginning the landscaping and plowing season.

Michael Danielson:
Landscaper and Plower

YMCA Lifeguard

Casey has more responsibilities than the average high school student due to her job as a lifeguard at the YMCA. Her afternoons are often spent monitoring the various pools and ensuring that everyone swimming is having fun while also staying safe. Her funniest moment lifeguarding was when she became so nervous when she thought a swimmer began drowning that she ripped the alarm button out of the wall.

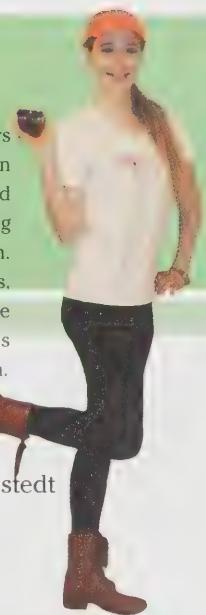

Casey Phillips

Shot-Cakes

Ashley spends more than twenty hours every working at the Shot Cake bakery in the Burlington Mall. Her job is comprised of taking orders from customers, making their cupcakes, and then decorating them. Not only does this bakery makes cupcakes, but it also places scoops of ice-cream inside them. Ashley's favorite flavor of cupcake is chocolate fudge filled with vanilla ice cream.

Ashley Ahlstedt

Five Guys

At Five Guys restaurant, Teddy has slowly worked his way up the restaurant's managerial ladder. When he started working for the restaurant, he was employed as a cashier, then as a waiter and cook, and he has finally started training as a shift leader. Essentially, he will be responsible for ensuring that all aspects of the restaurant run smoothly while he is working.

Theodore Mourousas

Johnny works an average of twenty hours a week at the loved coffee shop: Starbucks. He has mastered the recipes for the numerous calorie-dense drinks at the store and is also the most efficient in completing tasks. His favorite drink is the Caramel Macchiato, and he loves working with his second family, otherwise known as his coworkers.

Having lived through the turn of the new millennium, we grew up with trends leaving our lives just as quickly as they entered. Things as insignificant as silly bands would become the obsession of students throughout the hallways of Woburn High and those of schools across the country. Within weeks, though, these trends would fade from our consciences only to enjoy very brief revivals. Of course, these trends ranged far beyond accessories into the spheres of clothes, apps, television shows, social media, celebrities, slang, music, and movies. Someday our children will be embarrassed that we ever tweeted, snap chatted, or obsessed over Pretty Little Liars on a new social media site that along with numerous trends, will have forever faded from popularity.

Possibly one of the greatest advantages to living in Woburn was its close proximity to Boston. From the time we were very young, parents and teachers gave us our first Boston experiences through Duck Boat Tours and trips to the Museum of Science and Aquarium. As we grew older, we attended our first Red Sox game at Fenway Park and Celtics and Bruins games at the Garden. Finally when our parents trusted us enough, we were allowed to venture into Boston ourselves to wander through the Back Bay and Faneuil Hall. As time progresses, many of us will grow either closer or farther from Boston, but the many memories we have from growing up underneath the city's shadow will never leave us.

f13rce superfans

In no other town or city was the commitment to ones' school and teams more evident than in Woburn. Since the first football game our freshman year, fans from the class of 2013 always supplied the cheers and support that teams often required. Whether there was a basketball, hockey, or football game, supporters were always sure to arrive, prepared to fulfill their duties as hardcore super-fans. The feeling in the stands was electric as student's cheers buzzed towards the court or field, rendering players with energy and opponents with fear. Despite the outcome of any game, Woburn's fans always held firmly to their teams with faith and support.

watch for senioritis

Senioritis: (n.) A virus which seems to affect mainly second semester seniors. This virus can be deadly to one's grades, as the carrier becomes totally apathetic about their grades, classes, homework, etc. This results in many "zeros" or failing grades - ultimately leading to the drastic lowering of the grade in the carrier's classes. Side effects include: Failure to give a hoot, complete and utter lack of interest, and not graduating with the carrier's class.

fierce competition

In the city of Woburn, the word “pride” appears almost disgraceful without “Tanner” placed before it. Alone, “pride” becomes a shortened phrase mutated for the sake of simplicity, but “Tanner Pride” is a familiar motivator that sends adrenaline racing down the spines of athletes and fans alike. This is not a truth restricted simply to our senior class; it is a trait that has been passed down to us by Woburn High alumni, including grandparents, parents, brothers and sisters, teachers, and previous classmates. Tanner Pride was created before we came to walk the hallowed hallways, cheer from the boisterous stands, or run down the spacious fields. As students of Woburn High, we feel an immense adherence, respect, and dedication to Tanner Pride as we continue to uphold and broaden its meaning with our own variations of ferocity and talent.

The class of 2013 brought a new spectrum to supporting and competing in Woburn athletics. During Thanksgiving pep rallies, our cheers boomed over those of our fellow classmates due to both our intensity and our grade’s immense size. Of course, it was difficult not to cheer for the football and cheerleading teams’ inspired rendition of “I’m Sexy and I Know It” during junior year. We have made ourselves seen and heard at football, hockey, and basketball games throughout the years by occupying the most seats and contributing the largest number of players. Other classes would consistently dread the moment at sports banquets when coaches would spend countless minutes awarding athletes from the class of 2013. Despite always having to face classmates questioning their choice of clothing, students were seen throughout the hallways clad in shirts and ties or jerseys in commitment and support to their team on the day of big games or meets. Being a Woburn High athlete and super fan has had its highs and lows. The whole school was crushed when the girls hockey team lost the state title at the Garden to Saint Mary’s, but we were all incredibly proud that a Woburn team had made it as far as they did. The night of the game, we displayed our pride by cramming into busses to cheer for them in Boston. The following year, we were lifted up once again when they finally defeated Saint Mary’s winning the league title. Naturally, any sports team’s win against Winchester or Reading has raised the entire city of Woburn’s moral, including the boys outdoor track team’s win over Reading for the league title sophomore year. Overall, Tanner pride has always been a cause worth fighting for. Over the past four years, we have often found ourselves shivering on the Connolly Stadium bleachers during a cold November night firmly holding onto a hot cup of Dunkin’s coffee, or staring blankly behind a helmet into the face of some oversized “teenager” ready to break us in half to score for their team. Both instances may seem less than ideal to many, but Woburn residents take pride in their fierce dedication to competition. It is a motivator that our class has inherited and used to continually improve ourselves not only in athletics but in all aspects of our lives. As we move forward, we must hold onto healthy competition as it has historically brought humanity greater lengths than we could ever have imagined possible.

fierce passion

Even with our class's incredible focus towards schoolwork and sports, we still fit time in our schedules for volunteerism, music, art, and hobbies. A diverse student body requires a diverse number of options for extracurricular activities. From spending an afternoon volunteering at The Boy's and Girl's Club with Key Stone to reading and discussing the classics in Shakespeare Society, Woburn High covers a range of more than forty clubs and activities that are sure to fit the interests of any student.

The prominent factor that set our class apart from others was our intense passion and dedication for whatever club or group we may have been apart of. Most of us have witnessed the talents of students from drum line and band at the halftime shows of football games as they pumped up both players and fans. Their talents were to be expected, though, due to the numerous times they had made the agitating walk to the very bottom corner of the school for practice. The same is true for chorus, whose vast numbers of individual voices converged perfectly together on the nights of the Winterfest and Spring concerts in such a beautiful manner that forced audiences to their feet in applause. Throughout the years, the people of Woburn have made their way down towards the center to experience one of Woburn's greatest traditions: the Halloween Parade. Without the help of Leo club, the parade would not have run smoothly from start to finish each year. Finally, judging by the way students ripped, tore, and clawed for the latest editions of the Bull's Eye, one would expect the editors to have hidden some of the secrets to life in between the lines of its elegantly written pages (which they did). It is impossible to describe each and every school club and activity in this short paragraph, but it is not necessary. Their activities over the past four years have been a crowning factor which defined our class and allowed us to shine in a diverse number of settings.

showing off fierce talent

Jisoo Sim: Jisoo originally became interested in art, at a young age due to her lack of ability in the subject. "I was just really, really bad," explains Jisoo. Her self improvement motivated her to continue art throughout middle school and high school, and even today she says it is the only thing she does solely for herself. Although she never imagined art becoming prevalent in her future, she discovered that a career in architecture would provide her with the opportunity to combine her academic and personal interests. Jisoo is ultimately excited at the prospect of doing something she loves in college and hopes to someday become a distinguished architect.

Katelyn McCann: Katelyn began to pursue art her freshman year, due to her grandmother's love for design. The expressive freedoms and ability to fully realize her creative ideas, instantly transformed art into one of her greatest passions. Thanks to her teachers and the numerous friends she has made through her art classes, Katelyn plans to minor in graphic design during college. With any career path she chooses, Katelyn believes that art will always play some role in her future.

life in color

student's abilities shine

Many students from the class of 2013 expressed themselves through classical art mediums such as sculpture and painting, while many others chose more modern art forms, like photography and digital design. Thanks to a wide variety of art classes offered at Woburn High, students learned subjects ranging from basic paint strokes to the hidden secrets of Photoshop. None of these classes would have been possible, though, without the passion and dedication of both the students and their teachers. Each year, students were given the opportunity to display the very best of their work in the school's art show. As many walked to lunch each day, they were given the opportunity to stop and view rows of art from some of the most creative and thoughtful minds of our school. Even more impressive, artwork was submitted into the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Show and judged alongside other work from across the state of Massachusetts. Students and faculty at Woburn High realized the influential and necessary role that art plays in developing a stronger individual, community, and school.

Ashley Ahlstedt quietly works on yet another painting assigned by Ms. Dugan. Sadie Harmon spreads out across the floor to ensure that she has enough space for her painting. Haley Flight steadily draws the muscles of the arm in her period 7 art class. Charlene Brown paints a colorful example of abstract artwork. Jisoo Sim makes sure to draw every last detail of the arm's muscles. Katelyn McCann diligently paints modern art to ensure she receives the best grade possible on her project. Sara Angelo mirrors her self-portrait at the art show. Glenn Buckless shows off a creative movie poster he designed in Photoshop. Khalif Hashim, Andrew Deane, Kristen Buehler, and Alana Buckley display their best work from Mrs. Thifault's digital design class. Alicia Esquelin and Chelsea Doke stop searching for their work at the art show to pose for a quick picture.

stick to the beat

If asked, any member of the band or chorus would agree that both groups were as close, if not closer, than any sports team. Connected by a love of music, many students actively participated in both groups throughout their four years of high school while also making friends, creating memories, and of course, playing and learning music. Thanks to their unity, dedication, and hard work, both were able to come together for a vast number of performances in front of many different audiences. For years, the marching band proudly walked through the streets of Woburn during the Thanksgiving Parade, and the chorus harmoniously sang in unison during their annual Winter Fest concerts. With passion and pride for their art forms, both the band and chorus filled the hallways and fields of our school with beautiful music that made our four years only more enjoyable.

The entire chorus sings in unison during their annual Winterfest Concert. The acapella choir, lead by Mr. Gilbertie, show off their talent. John-Carlo Secondino sings with his fellow acapella choir members. Scott Parker strums away at his bass guitar while the rest of the school band performs play behind him. Jisoo Sim excitedly awaits her chance to perform, while sitting among fellow band members. The Woburn High School Band marches in the most orderly fashion off the football field. The Woburn High drumline continues to play while they leave the football field, after a performance.

fierce talent

Lindsay Pradieu: Lindsay first joined chorus in middle school for her love of music and the opportunity to perform with others who shared her passion. Chorus helped Lindsay overcome her stage fright and gave her the confidence to join her church choir. Whenever Lindsay is singing, she is happy, and plans to continue performing throughout college with hopes of becoming a musical therapist.

David Kisiel: One of David's greatest passions is music. He has been playing guitar and singing since the third grade and began learning to play piano in the fourth grade. He loves being in the spotlight and has performed on stage multiple times. Some of his favorite memories include his performances with the Jazz band. David first joined the band freshman year and loves the unity of the group, and the chance to perform with others who share his love of music.

The Seussical is the story of an elephant named Horton, who one day, hears voices coming from a dandelion. These voices belong to minuscule creatures called Whos, who live on the dandelion in the city of Whoville. Amazed at his discovery, Horton attempts share his flower with the other animals of the forest, but they are incapable of hearing the Whos' voices. Eventually the animals decide to steal Horton's flower, and the musical follows Horton through his journey to find his flower and save the Whos.

2010 seussical

In Thoroughly Modern Millie, a young girl from the South moves to New York City during the 1920s to pursue her dream of becoming an actress. Upon arriving in the city, Millie moves into the apartment complex of the sinister Mrs. Meers who sells young girls into slavery in Hong Kong. Viewers follow Millie on her journey to becoming an actress, relationship with the mysterious Jimmy Smith, and eventual escape from slavery.

the 2012 sound of music

For two days every year, pieces of songs and fragments of lines echoed from the band and chorus hallway as students awaited their chance to audition for the school musical. For some, it was an opportunity to create something from nothing, for others it was a chance to showcase their talents to the school. Overall, no one could deny the unity that performers felt as roles were assigned and displayed outside the band room doors. Almost everyone received a part and instantly became responsible for something much bigger than themselves. The musical always started as a group of competitors who eventually came together for incredible performances. Each year the shows became better thanks to dedication of performers, tech crew members, and teachers.

Michael Paladino jumps onto stage as the infamous Max Detweiler. Casey Phillips and Sadie Harmon act the part of humble nuns with two of their co-stars. Timothy McCall, Emily Messina, Sadie Harmon, and Nicolette Melanson make small talk with Max Detweiler during a dinner party. Andrew Allen hands a cup of tea to Captain Von Trapp while acting as the captain's every faithful butler, Franz. Michael Paladino and Timothy McCall reveal to Captain Von Trapp that he must join the German army. Molly Kupris prepares to sing, "My Favorite Things."

fierce persistance

Friday night, just as the snowfall was beginning to increase, Jessie left his house at six o'clock to battle and did not return till one o'clock in the morning on Monday. For over fifty hours, Jessie plowed the streets of Woburn as well as four other surrounding towns and cities. He and the other workers only ever stopped for sleep, breaks, and snacks. At one point, his plow even broke, but thankfully, he managed to fix the issue within an hour. Without Jessie and the other workers, the streets of our community as well as others would have been left completely covered in snow, barring emergency vehicles and various workers from passing.

finding nemo

Nemo was the incredible fusion of two different storms, one from the South and the other from the Mid-West, which completely shut-down the Northeast for nearly five days. To the joy of students at the high school, terrified school administrators quickly closed all schools in the Boston area before any snow had even fallen. Ominous warnings from numerous weatherman warned of the sheer magnitude of the storm, but students from the high school could only focus on the fact their Friday school day had been cancelled.

After experiencing almost no snowfall the year before, many people were unprepared for the three feet of snow that blanketed our city. As with all snow days, students quickly found ways to spend the seven hours they normally spend in school. To most people's surprise, there was not a flake of snow until after the school day had ended. Of course students who waited for the storm with eager anticipation had the entire weekend to enjoy the three feet of snow that fell through Friday night and into Saturday morning. Many chose to simply spend their days indoors with numerous naps and movies. Others chose to spend their days outdoors with trips to the Joyce for sledding and backyard snow ball fights.

Many students who had procrastinated their homework until Sunday night were thrilled when Facebook statuses and Tweets rang the news of an additional cancellation for Monday. Nemo was truly the perfect storm for seniors as none of the days needed to be made up at the end of the year. For the remainder of Massachusetts residents this storm was a huge inconvenience because of the roads that needed to be cleared for state for residents to return to work. Seniors from the class of 2013, though, grabbed onto this final chance to read their cities name with the word cancellation underneath on the morning news.

Yerd survival guide:

1. assemble the team

During the spring of junior year, Mrs. Thifault and Ms. Getherall poured over applicants to find the best possible candidates to create the class of 2013's yearbook. Reenacting Ocean's Eleven, the duo managed to find a photographer, a writer, a photo-shop genius, some expert designers, and a scrutinizer.

2. choose a theme

The very first day the eight of us met as a group, we were also introduced to our yearbook guru: Susan Happel. With help from Susan, we decided that the only theme that would ever describe our senior class would have to be FIERCE.

3. organize the book

Surprisingly, the very next decision our group had to make was the layout of the entire book! From the first to last page we decided what would make up the contents of every single page in the book before our senior year had even begun.

4. summer bonding

Head to the beach, have a campfire, swim together, simply do anything to bond over the summer. It is imperative that a yearbook staff becomes a family, or cult as we liked to call ourselves, because the following months after summer will be some of the busiest and most stressful months of your lives. While hurrying to finish designing the last page of an eighteen page deadline, Yerds look back to these months for a time when they were happy.

5. write, image in, design, and photoshop

A Yerd's first deadline begins the first day of senior year. With almost 200 pages to design, it is important to start as quickly as possible. Deadlines are the main cause of a Yerd's anxiety, anger, depression, tears, and overall unhappiness, and it is of the upmost importance that everyone knows their dates and deadlines. A Yerd often finds themselves waking up in the middle of the night worried about line spacing, or coming into school on a Saturday morning to finish cutting out a student on Photoshop. Yerds are family and will provide the most support during these stressful months. Always remember to relax and look to fellow yearbook members for assistance.

some words from the advisors...

Each year we have the wonderful opportunity to select our staff through a series of applications and interviews. It is not an easy task, but once selected the staff quickly learns how to be a Yerd family. They learn how to work together as a team by making deadlines, designing pages, brainstorming ideas and realizing that creating a yearbook is truly a labor of love. It was our pleasure to advise this hardworking group. We have shared many fun memories together including but not limited to Tim's true stories, Elyssa's Yerd obsession, April's never ending yearbook page, Sam's photography quest, Erin's tackling of the sports pages, Courtney's decorating ability, Liz's never ending sentences, and Annie's homemade desserts. We hope the 2013 staff will always remember their little Yerd family as they begin their new adventure in life. Best wishes... Mrs. G and Mrs. T

olympics

MOST DECORATED OLYMPIAN EVER The medal count as Michael Phelps ended his swimming career in London was staggering: 22 in all, including 18 Golds. From London alone, Phelps earned four Golds and a pair of Silvers. The 27-year-old champion officially retired from competitive swimming after the Olympic Games and was vague about his plans for the future. Also in the pool, Colorado's 17-year-old Missy Franklin captivated fans, winning four Golds and a Bronze while setting two new world records. And Ryan Lochte's five new Olympic medals, including two Golds, along with his big personality and good looks, set off a new career on screen — though he already committed to competing in Rio. Ongoing controversy surrounded record-breaking performances by Chinese swimmer Ye Shiwen, 16, who won a pair of IM Golds and smashed world records by delivering times better than either Phelps or Lochte. Proving doubters wrong, Shiwen tested clean for doping.

GOLD THRICE Called "the greatest beach volleyball team of all time," Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh Jennings repeated as women's beach volleyball champions in London. In addition to their three Olympic Golds, the duo won three World Championships before May-Treanor retired. RECORD-BREAKING When Carmelita Jeter anchored a world-record effort in the 4x100-meter relay, Team USA won the Gold medal with a scorching time of 40.82 seconds. That mark, the first in history under 41 seconds, broke a record set in 1985.

USA	GOLD 41	SILVER 29	BRONZE 29	TOTAL 104

GREAT BRITAIN	GOLD 24	SILVER 14	BRONZE 19	TOTAL 65

BADMINTON EXPULSION Eight players from three different Asian teams were controversially excluded from the Games for not trying hard enough to win matches. Officials said their attempts to throw early matches violated the Olympic spirit.

DENIED South Korea's Shin A-lam waited more than an hour for her appeal to be heard before leaving the fencing strip. Britta Heidemann of Germany, who advanced to the Gold medal match but lost, was awarded the winning touch.

MORE GOLD Without dropping a set during the Games, sisters Venus and Serena Williams earned Gold in doubles with victories over the Czech Republic and Russia. In addition, Serena took top singles honors, so she — like her sister — owned five Olympic Gold medals.

FIERCE 5 The U.S. women won the team gymnastics competition, their first team Gold since 1996, by a whopping five points over second place Russia. Because only two from each team can compete, Jordan Wieber was edged out of the individual all-around finals. There, Gabby Douglas earned the individual all-around Gold, Aly Raisman medalled twice and McKayla Maroney's "not impressed" look after winning the Silver medal in the vault finals became an Internet sensation.

BLADE RUNNER While South African double amputee Oscar Pistorius left London an inspiration to many, his reputation lost its shine (and sponsors pulled their endorsements) just months later when he was charged with the murder of his girlfriend, Reeva Steenkamp.

SEASON-ENDING INJURY Defending Olympic downhill champion Lindsey Vonn crashed and tore two knee ligaments in the super-G at the Alpine world championships.

VACATING THE VATICAN Pope Benedict XVI announced his resignation at 85. He was the first pontiff in 600 years and only the sixth with historical certainty to do so.

SUPER BOWL XLVII Heading into the game, the biggest stories were that teams coached by brothers John (Baltimore Ravens) and Jim (San Francisco 49ers) Harbaugh would face each other, guaranteeing that a Harbaugh-coached team would win the New Orleans contest, and Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis announcing his post-game retirement. The Ravens were ahead 21-6 when Beyoncé took the stage for a halftime extravaganza that included a Destiny's Child reunion. After a prolonged power outage in the stadium, the momentum changed and the 49ers outscored Baltimore 25-13 in the second half. Ravens QB Joe Flacco, MVP, and his team held on to win 34-31.
